Hero Clients

As announced in our last newsletter, we started our Hero Client Initiative. Through this program, we recognize clients, who as essential workers, risk their lives merely by performing their duties. In recent weeks, we highlighted the following people:

- A Guest Services Attendant at Target who had the unenviable task of dealing with angry customers because the store had no toilet paper, hand sanitizer or cleaning products. This person had the misfortune of being placed out of work and is eager to get back to helping her peers.
- The Department Chair of the Special Education Department at a Northern Virginia high school and a part-time worker at Aldi.
- A daycare worker in Woodbridge, VA.
- A sterile procurement tech for a Baltimore area hospital who had been redeployed to clean disposable PPE equipment so they would not run out.
- A Customer Service Rep at a DC area hospital who was one of the first people any potential patient would meet when they came to the hospital. She had to Lysol her shoes after every shift.
- A truck driver for a produce company who kept grocery stores well-stocked and last, but not least
- A FedEx deliveryman, who kept the flow of essential products to the people and business on his route. And if that was not enough, he rescued a family from a car that had overturned when he came upon them. He was truly a hero.

All of these Heroes received lunch for their teams and e-cards signed by our team. Thank you for all you did for our community.

If you know of someone working on the front lines who we can recognize, please contact us at info@chasenboscolo.com.

Our Trial Team is Fighting for You

The courts and workers' compensation commissions in Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia continue to navigate the stay-at-home orders in each jurisdiction. Our trial team has been actively involved in the reopen plans for many of the courts and commissions so that our clients can get their day in court, even if that is done virtually.

The Maryland Workers' Compensation Commission has scheduled hearings, both in person and by web conference beginning June 8, 2020. In Virginia, the Workers' Compensation Commission will begin in-person hearings on June 11, 2020. They will continue virtual hearings as scheduled. The DC Office of Workers' Compensation is also scheduling virtual and telephonic hearings.

We continue to monitor the reopening plans for the courts in Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia. Civil trial dates have been scheduled for the fall. We are working on your cases. If you have any questions about your case, a postponement or how we continue to work for you while working from home, please do not hesitate to contact us.

Helping our Community

In early May, CB Attorney Casey Duchesne and Project Assistant Xenia Bermudez partnered to organize our first charity 5K fun run / walk. This virtual event was held Memorial Day weekend. More than 30 of our team participated in support of Operation Renewed Hope Foundation, a local organization that provides quality housing and supportive services to our Nation's homeless veterans. We hope the funds we raised will help service members and their families during this crisis.

We're Hiring

During the quarantine, ChasenBoscolo has added 4 new employees to the team. We are pleased to welcome Bhakti Desai, John Killingbeck, Kevin Wolfe and Semeret Haile. At a time when so many find themselves unemployed, CB has retained our entire team and continue to hire. We are proud to be growing during these unprecedented times.

ChasenBoscolo wants to help our clients, our community and our team. If you have questions about your case, how we continue to protect your rights or how we are staying safe, please contact me at bboscolo@chasenboscolo.com

Take care,
Ben Boscolo
